London Oxford Airport Invests in Major New Apron Development

London Oxford Airport will shortly start work to create a further 17,800m² (4.4 acres) of new high strength apron. At the same time it is resurfacing a further 5,000m² of established surfaces with both projects scheduled for completion by year end. This US$3.4m (£2.2m) project comes hard on the heels of the announcement of a new 4,440m² (47,800 sq.ft.) hangar which has just commenced construction on the south side of the main airport site.

“The apron development represents a considerable enhancement of capacity and infrastructure development which will effectively double the parking capacity at the airport for aircraft weighing up to 50 tonnes. On a busy day we can sometimes be stretched for space, but now Oxford Airport will be able to accommodate far more aircraft, for visiting operators and based residents, at rates that represent better value than most of our London-centric airport peers,” remarked Business Development

Director, James Dillon-Godfray.

“Adding the equivalent of over four football pitches-worth of additional space will give us a great deal more flexibility and allow with greater ease, the handling of modern regional airliners including the Bombardier Q400 and the Embraer family of regional aircraft, including the EMB-190 and the Lineage 1000 business jet.

Well prepared for major event demand including the 2012 Olympics

On occasions when we need to clear the main apron for major events in the future like the Silver stone Grand Prix, and the forthcoming Olympics, Oxford will be able to accommodate typically 40 or so mid to larger-size executive jets opposite the new award-winning Oxford jet FBO terminal facility,” he added. In June the airport started work on a brand new 4,440m² (47,787 sq.ft) three-bay hangar in an investment worth £3 million. The new three-bay facility will offer independent landside access, office space and car parking tailored to clients' requirements. It will be the largest single facility built at the airport to date and when complete in December, it will have increased the total hangarage at the airport by 78% since 2005 to 240,500 sq ft (78,000m²)

Major seafront development in Dammam to boost property & tourism activities in Saudi's Eastern Province

Injaz appoints Aecom to commence infrastructure design works on Al Marina Project

The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia's Eastern Province expects to expand its real estate and tourism markets through the Al Marina project, the only comprehensive mixed-use seafront property development in the country's largest province. While the Eastern Province is known more as the base for state-owned Saudi Aramco and a major source of dates, the Kingdom's second major product, it hopes to further diversify its industry base through key projects such as the 3.3 million sqm marina being built in its capital of Dammam

Injaz Development Company, the Riyadh-based master developer and property investment firm overseeing the Al Marina Project, recently signed a SAR multi-million contract with US-based professional, technical and management support services company Aecom to commence infrastructure design works on the seafront development. Upon its completion, Al Marina will be a new destination between Dammam and Khobar that will rival both in its public facilities, which will include a 300,000 square meter lagoon with elaborate fountains, waterfront shopping mall, open air recreational areas and high-rise commercial strips, as well as residential areas developed with the highest planning standards, and providing all the support facilities which include educational, health, fire/police stations, community center and mosques, among others.

"We are adopting high-quality, world-class standards and bringing in key partners such as Aecom to ensure that Al Marina stands out among the Eastern Province's developments. There is so much room for long-term growth in this area and we believe that this project will help highlight the province's potential as a property and tourism hub. When the Kingdom's mortgage law finally pushes through, hopefully this year, then we can expect residential opportunities to surge in this part of the country," said Omar Al Kadi, President and Managing Director, Injaz Development Company.

Aecom is a Fortune 500 company that provides professional, technical and management support services in more than 100 countries. The company posted revenues of USD 6.1 billion in 2009. Through its expertise across a broad range of markets, including transportation, facilities, environmental, energy, water and government, Aecom will enable Al Marina to meet its design, functionality and sustainability goals.

Founded in 2006, Injaz Development Company specializes in strategic real estate development projects for short- and long-term investment. It is renowned for designing and building projects that form 'cities within cities,' in the same mold as its flagship Al Marina development. Injaz's 'Total Solution' approach to real estate investment, development and services includes identification and acquisition of real estate investments, internal and third-party project development, property marketing, and sales support.
